Routines

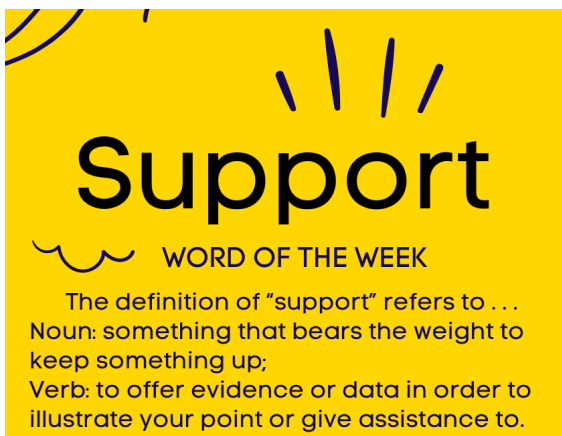

One of the things about school that you can rely on is that we operate around schedules and routines. Students learn how to enter the building in the morning, how their class begins (with a slow start of reading usually), how to transition to other classes like music or gym, and what their daily schedule looks like.

At home sometimes things are less structured which is normal, however, there are a few routines that can provide comfort and stability to children.

I recommend that you consider what your bedtime procedures are. Young children especially need reminders of all the responsibilities they have before bedtime. Does it start with a calming activity with parents, such as story time, peaceful music, or a bath? Getting cleaned up personally or even in their bedroom also helps to transition to a calm sleep routine. Some families like to prepare for the morning the night before by packing lunches and setting out clothes for tomorrow. Start at least 30 minutes before bedtime and remember their bedtime (even at 12 years old) should be much earlier than yours as an adult.

Morning routines are important too and although it certainly is normal to feel like mornings are hectic, it's important for us to remember this sets the tone for our child's day. Preparing the night before definitely helps as does parent prep before the kids wake up. Teach your kids to comb their hair, get dressed and brush their teeth independently. Then as the parent you just need to double check on the backpack and other things they need for the day like instruments, sports uniforms, lunch, snow pants, etc.

If this is a daily struggle for you, you're not alone! Phew - these routines are hard! Make a chart to help everyone remember their jobs and the steps to make things run more smoothly.

HUNT HILL

DAY CAMP REGISTRATION

April 3 for members; April 17th for the public

Registration opens at noon.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR REGISTRATION:

Hunt Hill has a new online registration system. We recognize that this system is not intuitive and takes a bit of playing around with to get used to. We continue to work with the system to find ways to make it more user-friendly and appreciate your patience and understanding. We also invite you to give us a call if you get stuck on any step - we are happy to help.

For the best chance of successfully registering when the program opens, we recommend:

1. A parent or guardian should create an account on our registration platform. Review these instructions before starting. Once the parent/guardian's account is set up, children can be added.
2. To access early registration on April 3rd, the child must be a current student member or connected to a family membership. If you are unsure if the child is linked to a family membership, click on their profile, or call Hunt Hill 715-635-6543 before noon on April 3rd. To purchase a membership, review these instructions.
3. Please keep in mind that camps have been popular and we expect an influx of calls and questions on the day registration opens. If you have questions about registration, we recommend reaching out to us before Monday. (The office will be open Wednesday and Thursday from 9:00am - 4:30pm or emails can be sent to director@hunthill.org)
4. For more information on the registration process for day camps, click here.
